

CREATIVE BRIEF

Find the truth. Point the message. Define the action.

Brand Challenge

Boston University's School of Hospitality Administration thrives on collaboration, and a lively, hands-on learning environment. Yet its strong sense of community isn't always visible or celebrated within the school itself. The key challenge is to reinforce SHA's collaborative spirit among undergraduate and graduate students, faculty, and staff.

Objective(s)

Encourage a sense of community and school pride among BU's School of Hospitality Administration's Gen Z students by Fall 2026, measured by a 20% increase in student event participation and a 15% rise in social media engagement.

- Think: BU SHA is a tight-knit community where my professors and peers know me, and where I gain skills that apply not only to hospitality but to any industry where people and performance intersect.
- Feel: Excited and confident that I'll be supported, challenged, and connected in a city (and industry) full of opportunity.
- Do: Actively engage with SHA's events, student groups, and community to experience our shared culture and the unexpected applications of experience innovation.

Target Audience

Demographics: 18-27, primarily Gen Z undergrads and early-career grad students; mix of U.S. and international backgrounds.

Geographics: Based in Boston.

Psychographics: People-first, curious, and globally minded; they enjoy travel, food, and live events, and see hospitality as a way to create memorable experiences. Social media is both inspiration and proof of that – Instagram/TikTok for connecting with fellow students/alumni and LinkedIn for career options.

Purchase Behavior: Students and staff actively participate in SHA events, student orgs, and community traditions. They share their experiences through photos, quotes, and posts on social media, helping to shape the school's identity online and on campus. Decisions are driven by ROI, experiential learning, and global exposure, with timing tied to BU transfer cycles or grad application deadlines.

Human Insight

Hospitality students are experience innovators who feel most fulfilled serving others, and recognize the impact and value their skills bring to any career or industry.
